

MOTHER'S BOAT

Around 1950, mother got a TOMAHAWK SCOUT fishing boat. Mother was only 5 feet tall and the 12-foot boat was light and very easy for her to handle.

Every day at noon in reasonable weather, she would go out for an hour's fishing. She only took her 4 foot steel rod, open reel and one daredevil plus a hook to land the fish.

She expected a cheese sandwich to be on the table waiting for her when she returned.

Usually she caught 18 – 20 inch northerns which she released. But on one memorable occasion she got a fish that was nearly three feet long which she kept. Watching her in the small boat trying to stun the fish with an eight foot oar was a sight not to be missed.
